UN Women Asia and Pacific has reached the most marginalized women and girls across 32 countries in the region. A range of approaches were used to advocate for gender equality, partnering with government programmes to advance women’s rights; support women’s movements in influencing policy decisions; encourage more contributions from men as gender equality advocates; and advocate for increased investment to support gender equality. The Annual Reports highlight this work.

Women, men, girls and boys experience the impact of disasters in different ways. In Nepal, women, in particular single women, female-headed households, women with disabilities and older women, report discrimination in access to relief and information.
